

- Wie fandest du die Stationenarbeit am Sonntag? / How did you find the work stations on Sunday?

The work stations were very interesting on Sunday. Teachers from other countries told us how their school system works and what difference changes students have after high school. I realize that in Finland we don't have that much information as example in Germany or in France. Before I didn't know much about other countries's systems and I find that it would be great if we had that university day that Germany has. I learned so much on Sunday.

- Beschreibe positive und auch negative Aspekte der Microteachings, die du am Montag und Dienstag miterlebt hast? / Describe positive and negative aspects of the microteaching sessions which you took part in on Monday and Tuesday?

Poland organized our first microteaching session and there we were divided into small groups. Our task was prioritize things if we have an accident in the moon. I met new students and I wasn't speak with them before but in the group we had to use our teamwork skills and speak what we would need in the moon. After this session we get in the computer class and there we made some test and we learned what is our personal role in team work.

In this microteaching session I didn't see anything negative. I learned something new about myself and my teamworking and also I met new people and I learned also about them so there was lot of positive things.

Our second session was organized from Finland and it was my favorite. There we had to make a company related to sustainable development and my group made a music cafe. I had so much fun and there I learned also about group working. There wasn't also anything negative.

England's session was also nice and I learned what I can do in a gap year. I think that it was little bit boring that we just watched different websites and after that we made a debate about gap year.

Germany's session was also nice but I didn't realize everything in that. We played something where we had to buy something with coffee beans. My group was nice and I learned what things are important to me, example health and friendship. I think that session was little bit difficult to understand but it was fun.

In Hungary's microteaching session their teacher told us about Hungary's school system and about their school and then we made some "test". I learned so much new because before that I didn't know anything about Hungary's school system. Maybe one negative thing was that we didn't have enough time to do that test but it was very instructive session.

- Wie fandest du den Aufenthalt im allgemeinen und was hat dich besonders beeindruckt? /
How did you find the stay in generally and what particularly struck you?

I was first time in Poland and I liked that very much. I met so many incredible people and I think that new friends are the most important thing what I got from this trip. My host family was so lovely and I had lot of fun with them. People were more polite than finnish people and that was good to see. Also now I dare to speak english more easily and I think that it's very important for the future. I also got some ideas what I can do if I don't get in that university where I would want to go because I can keep a gup year or do something else in other countries.

The days in Poznan were all in all memorable.
