...However, my belief is more concerned about bringing some change to the lives of millions of women's education and to have more schools in every corner of the country to support young women and girls' education by cooperating with local and international educators. The other point is that this study is also to help other young researchers at the national or international level who are interested in understanding about the status and education of Ethiopian female leadership. Tariku, Rahel: Female Leadership In Ethiopian Schools. Master's Thesis (in preparation), University of Jyväskylä.
