Waking up with a jump

An Australian couple, 1 (joka) were fast asleep in their own bedroom, were woken by a crashing sound on Sunday night. “2 (Se, mitä) I initially thought was it's a lunatic ninja coming through the window,” Mr Ettlin told local media on Monday. “Then I saw it was a three-metre kangaroo 3 (joka) had smashed the window and was jumping around the living room.”

The kangaroo, 4 (jonka) legs were bleeding, ripped holes in the furniture and smeared blood all over the walls, 5 (mikä) means that the Ettlins have to renovate the whole living room. The Ettlins' daughter, 6 (joka) was sleeping in a room next to the living room, took refuge under the blankets. The injured kangaroo jumped on top of her, 7 (mikä) scared Mrs Ettlin to death. “There wasn't much 8 (jota) we could do. Bert tried to wrestle the kangaroo but whenever he managed to grab it, it struggled free,” Mrs Ettlin recalls.

Luckily the bleeding kangaroo jumped out of the window and the family, 10 (joista ei kukaan) were seriously injured, could recover from the shock caused by the surprise intruder.
