- I remember a really embarrassing moment when I was starting to learn Spanish.
- My teacher's name was Senor Sanches.
- He was from Mexico City in Mexico.
- He was always making jokes.
- One day he wrote "Buenas dios" on the blackboard.
- He then asked us if that was correct.
- I wanted to answer the question so I told him that the A should be changed to an O.
- Senor Sanchez said that: "That was a nice answer." and he changed the letter.
- Then he asked me if the spelling was now perfect.

- With absolute confidence, I said that I was happy with the outcome.
- Suddenly, the entire class started laughing.
- I looked around in confusion.
- Senor Sanchez then said that I should make one more change.
- "The letter O in the second word should be changed to an A"
- I shouted out and the teacher nodded with a smile.
- It was now correct.
- But I still remember the terrible feeling of embarrassment from that moment.
