Dear Auntie Ella,

I 1. am friends with a girl who 2. has a boyfriend. They 3. have been together for two years. They 4. are both students. But she and I just click. 5. We have similar interests and senses of humour, we understand each other and 6. have the same hobbies. 7. I am in love with her and I 8. have a feeling she 9. has feelings for me, too. We 10. have never been romantic but we 11. have been close to kissing. However, she 12. is and, I 13. am sure, 14. will be faithful to her boyfriend as long as 15. they are together. But we 16. have long phone conversations and she spends time with me when she 17. is not with him. Well, I 18. have had a serious think over this and what it 19. has been like for me. So now I have decided to put a stop to it.

This 20. is not fair to her boyfriend or me. There 21. is just one problem – I

22. haven't been able to stop thinking about her. Why 23. is she still with him?

Why 24. isn't she / is she not brave enough to break up with him? What should I do? – Edward

Dear Edward,

You should do ... nothing. You 25. have been wise putting a stop to it. I understand if 26. you're / you are still sad, but that will fade over time. It 27. will be easier if you get angry. I mean, she 28. she had an emotional affair with you for a long time. She 29. was selfish and she 30. hasn't been / has not been loyal to her boyfriend or you. 31. Be angry.

I 32. have no idea why 33. he still is her boyfriend if 34. she's not / she is not happy. All I know 35. is that you 36. were right and did the right thing. You 37. will have better relationships in the future. – Auntie Ella, your agony aunt
